

Chipped tooth grace

[Intro - sparse, one instrument, male vocal spoken, close and worn - no melody]

Sometimes I play my song back
just to feel the blade again.

Sometimes I play my song back
just to know what still ain't dead.

[Beat enters low, restrained - male vocal tightens, consonants land HARD, deliberate pocket]

I made BEAUTY out the bait.
beauty out of the BRUISE.
out the fucking trap set TIGHT like I was born to make it MOVE.

[Building - male vocal pushes forward, urgency creeping in, still spoken/rapped not sung]

So if I can sing to the Honeypot
and make that poison sound like TRUTH, tell me what the hell I'd make
if love came clean and followed THROUGH.

[Hook - full instrumentation drops in, male vocal delivers hook rhythmically chanted, hard attack, NOT melodic]

Chipped tooth grace.
Chipped tooth grace.
No knife behind the smile,
just scars I wear like lace.
Chipped tooth grace.
Chipped tooth grace.
Lord, imagine what I'd be
with an unbroken face.

[Post-hook - pull back to near-silence, one breath before the verse]

[Verse 2 - rap re-enters, harder pocket, deliberate snarl on the ad-libs]

I still make beautiful shit.
Yeah, that's the FLEX.
(that's the flex)
I still make beautiful shit
with a boot print on my CHEST.
They threw grime up on my name,
put static in my BREATH,
and I still made a hymn
out of a setup meant for DEATH.

[Drop to spoken, almost no beat - deliver flat and cold, let the words carry weight alone]

That ain't soft.
That ain't luck.
That's grace with a chipped tooth.
That's blood turned into music.
That's pain turned into proof.

[Beat rebuilds under the bridge - tension climbing back toward the hook]

If I can sing to the Honeypot
and make that poison sound like TRUTH,
tell me what the hell I'd make
if love came clean and followed THROUGH.

[Hook 2 - bigger than the first, male vocal hard-chanted lead, harmony layer if used stays in a separate female or background texture, not the lead]

Chipped tooth grace.
Chipped tooth grace.
No cage behind the care,
no wire in this embrace.
Chipped tooth grace.
Chipped tooth grace.
God help this whole fake world—
this is my unbroken face.

[Strip everything back - just voice, spoken, maybe a single sustained tone underneath]

I don't play it back to worship what I made.
I play it back
to grieve the song
I never got to make.

[Beat pauses - dead air for one full breath]

And still...

[Final hook - full swell, all elements in, male vocal cracks slightly on "mean loyal" for authenticity, hard consonant attack throughout, ends unresolved rather than fading out]

Chipped tooth grace.
Chipped tooth grace.
No catch. No code. No trap.
Just hands that stayed MEAN—
mean loyal, mean true,
mean real enough to REACH.
Chipped tooth grace,
that song still burns

through every lie they preach.

[Outro - instrumentation cuts abruptly on the last word, no fade]